Scleroderma is a rare, chronic, autoimmune rheumatic disease that affects the body by hardening connective tissue. Skin and all internal organs can be damaged by this illness. It is life threatening and currently there is no cure. However, successful treatments are available for individual organs.

If you have been diagnosed with Scleroderma, we want to let you know that you are not alone. 25 Associations in 19 European Countries united in the FESCA network are ready to support you and to stand together in this battle. Join our community and let's face it together.
