Find the Light to Bloom.

World Scleroderma Day takes place yearly on 29th June. This day is used to recognise the bravery of those who live with scleroderma (also known as systemic sclerosis).

Scleroderma is a rare disease that damages the skin, internal organs, blood vessels and connective tissue and has a profound effect on all aspects of one's life.

Find the Light to Bloom has been launched by the Federation of European Scleroderma Associations (FESCA) this year to shine a light on the unmet needs of people living with scleroderma and to urge policy makers to make improving diagnosis, treatment, and quality of life a priority.
